

Did The Black Community Drop The Ball on KCOH? NO! IT AIN'T OVER!

Written by Jeffrey L. Boney

Wednesday, 28 November 2012 00:00

Unfortunately, this isn't a trip down memory lane for our readers.

On the contrary, it is an opportunity to address the narrative that has been disseminated to the Black community concerning the sale of KCOH Radio 1430 AM and whether any African-American business people stepped up to purchase the station. As a small business that has thrived in the city of Houston for over 52 years, The Houston Forward Times is totally supportive of any business owners making business decisions that are in their best interest, which includes making money.

However, when various African-American business people reached out to us to inform us that the narrative being sold to the Black community, namely that there were no African-Americans that stepped up to the plate to buy KCOH Radio wasn't true, we knew that there had to be more to the story.

Equally confusing, is that this narrative has been consistently communicated over the KCOH radio airwaves by long time KCOH morning talk show host Michael Harris and several others. As the saying goes; where there is smoke, there is fire.

