Houston’s NeighborhoodLIFTSM event follows similar NeighborhoodLIFTSM events in Los Angeles, Atlanta, Phoenix, and Las Vegas; NeighborhoodLIFTSM events in Los Angeles, Atlanta and Phoenix have helped more than 893 potential homebuyers qualify for down payment assistance reservations totaling up to $20 million

HOUSTON – April 19, 2012 — Wells Fargo & Company (NYSE: WFC), one of America’s leading community banks and the nation’s largest home mortgage lender, today announced help coming for the Houston housing market with Wells Fargo’s fifth NeighborhoodLIFTSM market, on May 11 and 12 at the George R. Brown Convention Center, as it collaborates with officials from the City of Houston and non-profit organizations on helping the city overcome the effects of the country’s housing crisis. In addition, Wells Fargo will host its 62nd Home Preservation Workshop, and second in Houston, at the Reliant Center on May 17 to assist customers facing financial hardships with solutions to avoid foreclosure.

The NeighborhoodLIFTSM program has been designed to help communities attract qualified, prospective homebuyers to neighborhoods struggling with high inventories of unsold homes. In Houston, this will include a five-year goal of $3 billion in mortgage purchase loans by Wells Fargo, and a $9 million investment the bank is making this year for down payment assistance grants and homebuyer support programs that help consumers achieve successful, sustainable home ownership.

Wells Fargo chose Houston as its fifth market for the NeighborhoodLIFTSM program based on the city’s high concentrations of homeowners, foreclosures, delinquencies, and overall housing inventory. Similar criteria resulted in Los Angeles, Atlanta, Phoenix, and Las Vegas becoming the program’s first markets. Two-day NeighborhoodLIFTSM events, held in each city in February and March, helped 893 prospective homebuyers qualify for down payment assistance reservations totaling up to more than $20 million.

“Though no one program will re-stabilize housing markets, the positive reception of the NeighborhoodLIFT program in Los Angeles, Atlanta, Phoenix, and Las Vegas encouraged us to expand this effort to Houston,” said Jon Campbell, Wells Fargo’s head of Social Responsibility. “As America’s largest mortgage lender, Wells Fargo knows there are Americans who want to take advantage of today’s great home values and historically low interest rates, but do not because of barriers to home ownership, such as affording a down payment. We hope this effort helps those aspiring to successful home ownership, and communities seeking to recover from the worst housing downturn in a generation.”
