Who can forget the fan who caught the forceful brunt of Miguel's flying leap across the stage during the Billboard Music Awards? What I can remember vividly following that is Miguel conducting an interview with his arm around the fan, Khyati Shah, telling the interviewer (trying to convince her and everyone else) that she was okay after his roundhouse kick which resulted in her head being smashed into the stage.

Apparently, Miguel's attempt to smooth it over with the fan by bringing her backstage with him as well as sending out a tweet "thanking goodness" for her safety to his 500,000+ followers didn't cut it. Vip Bhola, Shah's lawyer has since reported to TMZ that "Some of the difficulties she's experiencing are cognitive in nature and lead to suspicion of a neurological head injury."

Bhola went on to accuse the Billboard Music Awards of responding to the accident with a pathetic gesture by simply giving Shah an ice pack to soothe her bruised elbow. He insists that his client should have been rushed to the hospital.

According to Bhola, Shah is waiting for test results from a neurologist and when the results are in, Shah will decide if she would like to proceed with a lawsuit.
