Multi-talented singer and actress, Brandy Norwood got her start in the world of fame at the tender age of 15 as a singer and later as an actress on popular show “Moesha.”

The pressures of life and work eventually boiled over, pushing the young diva over the edge with an eating disorder and breakdown.

Now 33 years old, she’s a proud mother of a 9-year-old girl and has taken on a new role on Lifetime series “Drop Dead Diva” as Elisa Shayne. She’s also starring in Tyler Perry’s movie, “The Marriage Counselor.”

But her career has come to a place where she feels it’s all for a purpose.

With her next album, “Two Eleven” due out in August, she explained Whitney Houston inspired the title and her whole career.

“I can just say that her life will never be forgotten and her life has inspired so many people, so many artists, and it’s awakened so many things inside of so many people.
