Singer-songwriter Emeli Sande has broken The Beatles' long-standing record for the most consecutive weeks spent in the top ten of the U.K.'s Official Albums Chart.

The Scottish songstress's Brit Award-winning debut album "Our Version of Events," released in February 2012, has held a slot in the charts for 63 consecutive weeks, beating the previous record held by the Fab Four for their release "Please Please Me," which spent 62 weeks somewhere in the top 10 between 1963 and 1964.

Sande's "Our Version of Events" has gone on to become the bestselling album of 2012 in the U.K. with over 1.82 million copies sold, according to the Official Albums Chart.

In an interview with the Official Charts Company, Sande described herself as being completely lost for words.

"The Beatles are the greatest band of all time and their legacy lives on and continues to inspire all of us that make music," she said. "I'm so happy that so many people have connected with the stories and the songs on the record, this really is our version of events now. I'd like to say thank you to everyone that has bought, played or shared my music in the last year, without your support this would never have been possible."
