

Al Sharpton and Herman Cain : The Civil Rights Movement

Written by Jacqueline Lawson
Saturday, 10 September 2011 00:00

Rev. Al Sharpton and Black Republican Presidential Candidate Herman Cain do not see eye to eye. Mr. Sharpton is exactly who he is suppose to be and makes no apologies for his delivery. Mr. Cain is a black man who wants to be recognized as articulate and worthy of the highest position in America, President of the United States. With that combination, conflict is unavoidable.

This is what the "media" had to say about these two brothers:

From Breitbart.tv :

During one of Al Sharpton's more obnoxious moments in NBC's post-debate coverage, he challenged GOP candidate Herman Cain on his position on states' rights. During the answer when Mr. Cain referred to the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Sharpton interrupted him and said "65" as if he was correcting Mr. Cain's knowledge of history. Of course, Sharpton got it wrong, the Civil Rights Act was passed in 1964 just as Mr. Cain said.

If Al Sharpton can't even bring an expertise on civil rights issues to NBC News, what does he bring?

What do you say he brings? Let's Talk About It...{jcomments on}