*The 2012 Houston Texans Training Camp has begun and fans throughout the city of Houston are very excited about the team's chances to make a run for the Super Bowl this season. The Texans opened training camp on Saturday, July 28th in front of a lot of fans who were just overwhelmed by the players taking time to pose for photos and sign autographs after their first practice.

*Injuries took a small toll during the first few days of camp with the biggest scare coming from veteran Pro Bowl wide receiver Andre Johnson. Johnson suffered a mild groin strain that will keep him out of practice for at least a week.

With the 2012 season under way, it's time to look at the Houston Texans' performance in the AFC South. The Texans have a record of 1-11, which is the worst in the league. The team's offense has struggled, and the defense has been inconsistent. The Texans are currently in last place in the AFC South, and they need to make significant improvements to have a chance of making the playoffs.
